

Equalization Payments

First made in 1957, equalization payments are monetary transfers from the federal government to provincial governments. Equalization payments are encapsulated in the Constitution to ensure that provinces with a lower capacity to generate revenue “have sufficient revenues to provide reasonably